Rumours about mountain lions are true

by JERRY GROZELLE

If you've ever been out in the wilds of Haliburton County and seen a flash of what appeared to be a puma (also known as cougar or mountain lion), your eyes may not have been tricking you.

Sightings of this elusive animal are rare, but several have been reported in and around Haliburton County, as recently as this summer.

Bob Brown and his friend Ron Sullivan, both cottagers on the north shore of Big Bob Lake, had a close encounter with a puma

Costs going up on Minden municipal building

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

Major problems with water and soil have driven up the price of the Minden Hills municipal building expansion, council was told last week.

Bob Romberg, the project manager for the site, told council that, although the project is progressing "quite satisfactorily," some unexpected issues have arisen.

During the excavation process, an underground stream was discovered. Water began spilling out from below the ground at about two to three gallons a minute, Romberg said, and the issue had to be dealt with immediately.

The site was "de-watered," he said. "Water had to be pumped out."

But the real expense came with changes to the design of the building. Because of the water level, the basement floor, which was originally to have been a concrete slab, had to be changed to a structural slab and the whole building raised six inches. This included an engineer's report and additional materials.

The water spillage also brought to light another issue of concern. "There was a noticeable sheen [on the soil] in areas where they

Lights out

An OPP officer directs traffic in front of powerless streetlights at the Hwy. 35 and Hwy. 118 intersection in Carnarvon during the brief power outage caused by downed powerlines from fallen trees on Saturday, Oct. 2. Power was out for several hours, starting mid-morning, and was restored mid-afternoon.

were de-watering," Romberg said in a later interview. "The odour was quite significant."

The site on which the new municipal building now stands was a waste site of some kind at one time, Romberg said.

The soil had to be tested and, although all tests came back well within MOE guidelines, the process help up the project for weeks. "Fortunately we did not have to treat the soil," Romberg said.

The water and soil issues carry with them a price tag of more than $85,000. The money will come from the project's contingency fund, which was set at $100,000 when this project was first started.

At the time when the project was accepted by council, the major unknown was piling. Romberg said that the architect expected to lose at least one pile, if not more. Fortunately, no piles were lost and no money had to be taken out of the contingency fund for extra piles, which are expensive.

The problem, however, is that some of the money from the contingency fund has already been spent in other areas of the building. At present, the total sits at nearly $135,000.

Concillor Peter Oyler asked Romberg what a typical contingency amount is for any given project. Romberg answered that anywhere between 10 and 15% of the total project cost is reasonable.

Oyler said that since the original contingency fund was set at about 10% of the project cost, going up to 15% is not unreasonable. Councillor Ingram Wessell was upset with the amount of money being spent on issues he said should have been foreseen.

911 ANNOUNCEMENT

Recent reports indicate that some 911 signage, both at properties and at road intersections, has been stolen, damaged and moved.

County By-Law No 2946 states that anyone who knowingly interferes with 911 signage is guilty of an offence and subject to a fine of $500.

The ability of the 911 system to meet the needs of our citizens depends on all signs being in place and in good order. If you know of any such signs that are missing or damaged, please report the problem to the 911 Project Team at (705) 286-2306.

Minden Hills council to shut down Gelert's community centre

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

The following are brief notes from last Thursday's Minden Hills council meeting.

The Gelert community centre will be shutting its doors on November 1st. Council voted to close the historic centre rather than invest thousands of dollars in upgrading its water system.

"I hate to see it shut down because people are proud of their little communities, but I hate to spend a fortune on it, too," Councillor Ingram Wessell said.

A new well for the community centre, including associated costs for an engineer's report and equipment to accommodate the well, would cost about $30,000, public works superintendent Bob Romberg said.

"We can't justify that kind of cost," Deputy Reeve Jim McMahon said.

Councillor Ron Buchanan was upset about the closure.

"I am dead against closing this building down," he told his fellow councillors.

The recommendation to close the centre passed by four, with Buchanan and Wessell voting against it.

The Lochlin Community Centre will be available to the residents of Gelert.

The fate of the building is still to be determined and will be decided in consultation with local residents.

911 road name changes

Council will not be changing any more road names until after 911 is implemented. The last of the 911 name changes were made at the meeting, including those that were approved previously.

Holiday closures

Council approved the hours of operation for municipal services during the Christmas holidays.

In his memo to council, CAO Gerry Morrison suggested that the township be closed during the week between Christmas and the New Year.

"As most of the townships are normally closed during Christmas week (this township was the only one open last year in our county), it was suggested that we close this year," he wrote in the memo.

Council accepted the suggestion, but added an extra day of holiday on Monday January 3rd to make up for the fact that New Year's Day (a statutory holiday) falls on a Saturday.

Therefore, the township will be closed Friday December 24th at noon and will reopen on Tuesday January 4th.

Council changes its mind and will not re-tender water inspection contract

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times staff

In the presence of two representatives from the Ontario Clean Water Agency, Minden Hills council voted against its previous recommendation to re-tender the water inspection contract.

Councillor Clayton Cameron has always been against council's decision to not renew its contract with OCWA and to open it up to tender instead.

"I feel that OCWA has done a reasonable job," he said, pointing to its handling of this year's oil spill at Archie Stouffer Elementary School as an example of efficient service.

Bob Romberg, the township's environment manager, said that, although he has no major concerns with OCWA, he stands by his previous recommendation that council re-tender.

One reason for Romberg's recommendation is that the current contract with OCWA does not include maintenance of the wastewater collection system or the water distribution system. Those duties are currently performed by municipal staff, Romberg said.

Romberg suggested that a consultant be hired to draft a Terms of Reference and that a new contract be based on those findings.

The cost for the consultant would run the municipality up to $20,000, he added.

Councillor Peter Oyler said he was surprised by the cost.

"It caught me off guard," he said. "While I recognize Mr. Romberg's concerns, I don't know if those outweigh the potential costs."

Councillor Cheryl Murdoch expressed concern over the fact that some duties are not part of the contract.

"What if something happens down the road," she asked.

Romberg, however, said that those duties could be negotiated with OCWA for inclusion in the contract.

"I think it is healthy to go out and shop; you don't necessarily have to buy," Deputy Reeve Jim McMahon said. "But I am not in agreement to spend $15,000 to $20,000 to hire a consultant."

He said that he was in favour of the township continuing its contract with OCWA and negotiating with the company to include maintenance of the wastewater collection system and the water distribution system.

In a recorded vote, council unanimously agreed to allow OCWA to continue its services in Minden Hills and to allow the municipality to negotiate further additions to that contract.

Traffic stopper

This female moose stopped traffic last week in Carnarvon when she took a leisurely stroll along Highway 118. She hung around the neighbourhood for most of the day, stopping for a drink in Mirror Lake. These photos were taken by local resident Roy Carter.

New voices answer phone

Up until last Tuesday, when people called the Stanhope Fire Department because of an emergency their call was answered by a group of local women and men.

These volunteers live in the township so they were familiar with the area and its back-roads. However, in preparation for the switch to 911 the fire department's emergency calls are now being answered by a dispatch centre in Sudbury.

This means it's more important than ever to know your proper 911 address especially now that some of the road names have been changed.

The fire department suggests that you keep a copy of your new 911 address near the telephone. Please make sure it has your property's number as well as the proper road name. The dispatcher will be using the new 911 addressing system.

Please continue to use the phone number you've always used (489-2222).

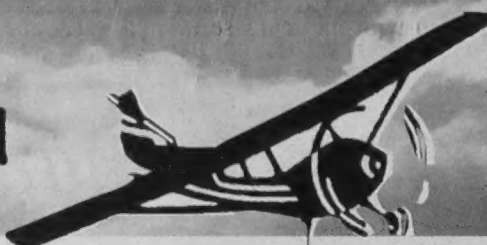

October is Community Support Month for County Home Support Services

Haliburton County Home Support Services would like to make the residents of Haliburton County aware that October is Community Support Month.

Community Support Services help seniors or physically disabled adults to remain in their own homes, thus keeping them out of the more costly hospital beds. Services such as meals on wheels, friendly visiting, home help, emergency response systems and security checks, help people to maintain or regain their independence so that they can continue to live their lives to the fullest.

Each autumn, community-based agencies mark the benefits which home care and community support brings to people in Haliburton County.

Cats are making comeback without help from MNR

early in July. Brown had bought a new truck a couple of weeks earlier and he was showing it to Sullivan at about midnight, under floodlights at his cottage.

"We heard a ruckus and a deer charged out of the bush," he said. "It saw us and veered off into the bush again. Less than a minute later we heard something in the area where the deer came out of the bush and out came a cougar. We got a really good look at it."

Brown said both he and Sullivan knew what they saw, but they couldn't believe their eyes. "I didn't tell anybody for a couple of days," Brown said. "I thought they'd think we were crazy."

But he did go to the Ministry of Natural Resources office in Minden to report what he saw.

Brown left the information with biologist Gerry Moraal, who says there have been a few sightings reported in the area, from Nogies Creek (north of Bobcaygeon) to Kushog Lake and from Bancroft to west of Minden. Moraal said some hair samples from the Bancroft were sent away for DNA testing.

The Ontario Puma Foundation will be setting up a "hair trap" in the Ingoldsby area this fall after a couple of sightings there. A hair trap is nothing more than a couple of strands of barb wire, with a lure scent in the middle to attract pumas. The scent used is from a puma female in heat.

The trap will be set up on property of Louise Berry's family.

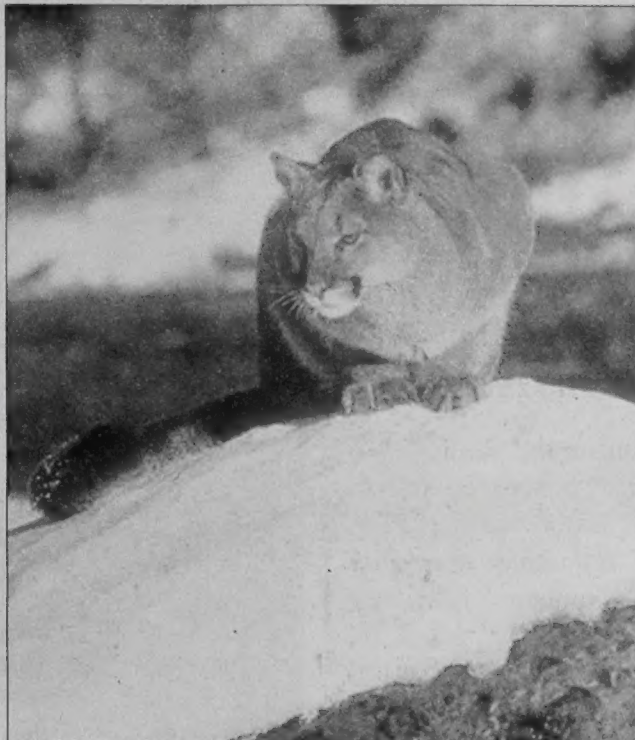

Louise Berry is one of the local people who have seen a puma. She tried to find out why her dog was barking near the family's Iron Kettle maple syrup making facility on February 28, 2002 when she saw the big feline making its exit. She took a good look at the tracks and went on the Internet to do some research, where she confirmed what she saw.

She says her neighbour was out on an ATV the following September and encountered a cougar. It was close enough that he threw a rock at it.

Berry has heard of other sightings in the area. "People have seen them crossing roads," she said. "People are starting to realize that there are a few of them around here."

Bob Brown said he had heard a rumour that the MNR had released some cougars in the area as a way of controlling the deer population. But Gerry Moraal said that isn't the case. Sightings of cougars or pumas have been reported in the area for many years.

"The MNR does not stock cougars," adds District

These photos were provided by the Ontario Puma Foundation.

Manager Bill Hutson. "It is a rumour and I don't know where it came from."

Stuart Kenn of Beeton has had a fascination with pumas for 30 years. In 2002, he and a few others interested in Ontario's puma population formed the Ontario Puma Foundation, an organization dedicated to recording information on Ontario's resident puma population and the rehabilitation of the species in Ontario. The current estimated population in Ontario is 550.

At one time, the population was believed to be as low as 40 animals. The decline in numbers is blamed on the European settlers who viewed pumas as a threat to their livestock. They were killed indiscriminately, almost to extinction by the late 1800s. Even with the increase in numbers, the North American puma is on the endangered species list in Ontario.

A cartographer by trade, Kenn has developed a map of puma sightings in Ontario. He is also the president of the Foundation.

The range of an adult male puma is from 150 to 1,000 square kilometres and a female's range is from 65 to 600 square kilometres. Pumas do much of their hunting at night. Their prey, in this area, ranges from moose and deer to beaver and rabbits.

Stuart Kenn said the puma is indigenous to this area and it may be making a slow comeback. He said there have been numerous sightings reported to the Foundation, the latest of which was on July 6, south of Kinmount in the area of County Road 121 and the Crystal Lake Road. He said there have been three sightings recently in the Ingoldsby area, two in the area of Bob Lake, one at Gull Lake and one at Mountain Lake. They have also been seen in the Gooderham and Wilberforce areas, Percy Lake and Little Hawk Lake.

Kenn says he believes there are five of the big cats in this area and he encourages anyone who sees one to contact the Ontario Puma Foundation with the details. He can be reached by e-mail at: skenn@ontariopuma.ca or by telephone at 905-729-4273.

The Ontario Puma Foundation has a website with information about pumas and a map of sightings. A form to record sightings is also available, along with contact information. The website can be found at www.ontariopuma.ca.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Be careful of what you wish for

For months following the tragic events in Walkerton the battle cry to the provincial government was "Do something!" Seven people had died and hundreds fell ill after drinking town water that had been contaminated by e.coli. This should never have happened, everyone agreed, and the government was blamed for cutting the budgets of the very agencies designed to protect our water system. People then expected the government to put safeguards in place to ensure that another Walkerton never happened again.

While the funding cuts did contribute to the situation, the major fault lay with something far more dangerously simple: human error. (Or criminal incompetence, or malfeasance, or willful ineptitude, take your pick.) The e.coli had been detected by the system's operator but the procedures which were in place to prevent people from drinking this water were not followed. It wasn't the system's fault, it was the operator's.

Today we are all paying the costs of the public outcry that followed the tragedy. The Conservative government initiated Bill 170, the Safe Water Act, and the Liberals are carrying through with it. The bill puts onerous responsibility on municipalities, apartment buildings, camps, campsites, bed and breakfasts, resorts and restaurants to make sure that any water to which the public has access is properly treated.

In cities and towns the major impact is the number of times the water has to be tested; these places already had the infrastructure in place and didn't need to make huge capital investments. But in rural areas and villages, where most people rely on well water, the new rules have added greatly to the cost of doing business. In Haliburton County, only Minden and Cardiff townsites offer town water; even in Haliburton everyone has to supply their own water.

Although private businesses will take a big hit by having to chlorinate their water – even if their own well water is perfectly safe – municipalities are in no better position to pay for the huge increase in costs. The rules have put all the little community centres at risk because even though they are used only a few times a year their water has to be tested weekly.

The first casualty is the Gelert Community Centre. Minden Hills council decided last week that it couldn't afford to keep it open. What a shame. But it's not council's fault; it's the new regulations. Even though Environment Minister Leona Dombrowsky has said that she doesn't want the new regulation to tear holes in the fabric of small town life her ministry seems unwilling to do little more than extend deadlines and make minor changes.

Maybe Minden Hills council will be more empathetic if a representative from a new group called Water Watch comes to visit. Based in Killaloe, this volunteer lobbying group recently held a meeting in Cardiff to get Haliburton County on the bandwagon heading towards Queen's Park. Water Watch has heard the stories about camps and campgrounds that will have to close because of the costs involved with implementing Bill 170. It wants a local committee to form and take the message to local councils. (Go to www.waterwatch.ca for details.)

Rules are good when they are based on common sense. The water which killed seven people in Walkerton was chlorinated. Why does the government think that forcing everyone to chlorinate their water will prevent another Walkerton from happening? MP

TO THE EDITOR

Times readers write

Asphalt plant in Irondale not much of a problem if you live in Montreal

To the Editor:

In response to my cousin Helen Pantridge's letters on asphalt plants, I think she is quite naïve if she believes that the Ministry of Environment wouldn't allow asphalt plants (if they posed an environmental risk.). She should watch the news some nights when they are talking about excess sewage being dumped in the lakes because the sewage plants can't handle it, or run down to Toronto and have a swim in Lake Ontario (Toronto's septic tank.).

You have to wonder why someone who lives in Montreal is so worked up over an asphalt plant here, or could it be because she has three cousins who work for Royel Paving?

There are only a couple of people really pushing for this asphalt plant and they already have a substantial income.

I also know quite a few local people who are against an asphalt plant here, but I can see her point of view. If I lived in Montreal, I couldn't care less how many asphalt plants they put here.

IN OTHER WORDS

Columnists and Letters to the Editor

Bald legals

Hunting is already acknowledged as one of the safest activities on the planet. Actually, there's probably better chance of getting hurt while golfing. This is especially true if you're making a chip shot in the middle of someone's deer drive. Luckily, the good people of Montana took safety measures even one step further when they changed hunting licence applications to include bald as a hair colour.

You see, up till now the only hair colour options available on the state's hunting application were the usual suspects - blond, black, gray, white, red and brown. No other options were allowed and I'm certain this is the reason why so many hairless hunters were forced to don cheap toupees and bad wigs - just so they could, in good conscience, fill out the application and get their licence.

Of course, not all of us are lucky enough to have a generous trapper for a friend and some men actually went out and bought these things. Failing this, the follically-challenged Montana hunter was faced with the horrific possibility of having to show the warden that, at one time at least, the carpet matched the drapes. This unsafe practice is now a thing of the past however.

But now that bald is considered a legal hair colour, hunters no longer have to put on cheap toupees nor endure the frenzied mating attempts of amorous flying squirrels - unless, of course, they want to give a little something back to nature. Furthermore, they'll never again have to lie about having a really wide part in their hair.

Now a bald hunter can take his camo hat off in quiet dignity and rest easy, knowing full well that the state has finally accepted his otter-like sleekness. From here on in, when he accidentally signals passing aircraft with his head, he won't have to explain. It'll be no big deal - unless that aircraft happens to be a passing space shuttle. In any case, a hairless hunter can sleep better at night knowing that nothing in nature quite resembles the top of his sun-burned head, except perhaps the backside of a baboon. And, fortunately, they're not legal game here.

My only concern now is for the hunter's emotional well-being. Some men are in deep denial about the status of their hair. And I sympathize with them, which is why I get my barber to trim my bangs so high.

Also, I have to wonder, when does the state officially make the pronouncement? Do they do it when there are fewer than twelve strands left on the comb-over? Do they wait until there's a high-gloss sheen? Will an exposed pate be enough to make the call? Or do they bide their time until there's more forehead than hair? At what point do they play God?

Depending on the strictness of their pronouncements, some of my fellow hunters might be traumatized. It's one thing to have your wife hint at it, but it's quite another to have a state conservation agency agree with her. Certainly, quite a few will dispute the call with an expensive legal team from Vidal Sassoon. Others might even quit hunting and gravitate to sports where people can see past skin colour - right down to overgrown ear hair.

Though it's harmless, the public reaction just highlights how vain some people really are. I tell you, it's enough to make a fellow want to grow his bangs back.

Change, it is a-coming

The usual gang of suspects was gathered in Dorset last week to hear a scientist preach to the converted about the permanent heat wave to come.

Glaciers are disappearing, robins are coming to Nunavut and, in Florida lately, it's been just one darned hurricane after another.

Growing seasons are expanding so quickly that cartographers are already at work redrawing those maps of growing zones that are supposed to help you decide what to plant in Haliburton.

The world certainly seems to be getting warmer even though scientists such as Environment Canada's Elizabeth Bush won't let you call what is happening global warming.

Call it climate change, Bush told me during a lunch break at the Forest Health Woodlot Conference. In her morning presentation, she had presented overwhelming evidence that changes are taking place.

The notion that the world is getting warmer took a battering during Haliburton's cool, wet summer but that's only weather. It takes centuries of weather to make a climate.

Exactly what the climate will be in Haliburton a generation or so from now is anybody's guess, though one of Bush's slides seems to show the prairie grasslands marching out of North Dakota and Saskatchewan and across the Great Lakes all the way to the Ottawa River.

That doesn't sound like Haliburton will offer much of a future for people who like trees in their forests and water in their lakes.

It may turn out that the grasslands will stop their march north before they get to the Gull River; climate-change experts are not about to get specific with long-range forecasts for particular localities.

But it doesn't take a scientist to see that if the climate change that now seems inexorable takes place, the Haliburton landscape will become quite different.

Scientists begin to sound like medieval theologians when they debate the exact nature of the changes to come, but the consensus is that the world's average temperature will rise by five degrees Celsius.

The farther north you get, the greater the change is likely to be, but let's put that aside. The difference between Minden's average temperature and Windsor's is five degrees.

In forestry terms, that moves Haliburton from the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence zone to the Carolinian. Think tulip trees at Eagle Lake, peach orchards at Coboconk and hickories at Highland Grove.

The transition is likely to be a messy one because climate norms will march north more quickly than the vegetation. The old ecology will be under assault from more droughts, more rainstorms, more heat waves and exploding populations of insect pests.

All of this was old hat to the gang at Dorset, which seemed to include at least a couple of retired meteorologists. The mood seemed to be that of a wake for an old friend whose life had been full of missed chances.

For most Canadians, climate change is no more than fodder for cocktail party, a story in yesterday's newspaper, a broken political promise and somebody else's problem, not to be taken seriously in the workaday world.

Most of us are so busy with our own lives that we'll go on hoping for the best, right up until the day things fall apart and maybe we won't even notice when they do.

Climate change is part of a cocktail of environmental nightmares we want the government to solve so long as they don't make us change our lifestyles.

If climate change isn't sufficiently worrying, try the prospect of water and food shortages. Ancient aquifers, underground lakes, are being drained to irrigate wheat belts in China and India and the Great Plains of the United States. The glaciers that water the Canadian Prairies are disappearing.

Research shows that grain yields fall dramatically and predictably as temperatures rise - 10 per cent for each degree above the optimum. World grain production has fallen short of consumption for four years in a row; last year's shortfall of 92 million tons set a record.

Most of us endure the environmental peril in which we live by ignoring it, by assuming that because solutions must be found they will be found. We live in a state of denial.

Most of us deal with the fact that life will end for each of us some day by pretending it won't. Perhaps the whole world, at least most of it, has figured out that's the only way to deal with climate change.

A capital experience for student leaders

During the recent election campaign, I put forward my list of local priorities for this riding. One of these priorities is a commitment to focus on children.

More specifically, I want to encourage young people to become more interested and involved in public life - whether it's voting in elections, getting involved in community and local interest groups, or becoming active in student government. I also want to show them the various careers in public life that await them after their education that they may not necessarily be aware of.

That's why I've created a program entitled A Capital Experience, where two students from local high schools will spend three days in Ottawa visiting government facilities to learn first-hand about a variety of interesting professional careers in the public sector.

I feel it's important for secondary school students to start planning for their future and I hope this program will give them additional choices when considering a career.

GUEST COLUMN

Barrie Devolin MP

This year's trip is scheduled to begin on Sunday October 24, and students will be invited from the following high schools: Haliburton; Fenelon Falls; Brock; LCVI; I.E. Weldon; St. Thomas Aquinas; and Crestwood.

At this time, the agenda has not been worked out in detail, but it's likely to include a tour of my offices and Parliament Hill, a visit to Agriculture Canada's experimental farm, a meeting with staff in a Cabinet Minister's office, and a question-and-answer session at External Affairs with a Foreign Service Officer.

I am also hoping to get an invitation for a formal reception at a foreign embassy, and to visit at least one non-governmental organization (e.g. CARE Canada).

see STUDENTS page 8

An entertaining dinner

Keith Moore and the band Minor Details entertained the 200 people who were feted at the Haliburton Highlands Health Services' volunteer appreciation dinner at the Haliburton Legion. The roast beef dinner was prepared by Caleb's Meadow catering and served up to the volunteers as a way of thanking them for all their hard work over the year.

Students will get a look at Ottawa's political heart

Given that this is the first year, it will be trial-and-error to determine how many stops we can reasonably make in two working days.

To pay for this trip, I have already sent out letters to a variety of potential sponsors in our community asking that they cover the costs for one of the 14 students. Most of these letters have gone to service clubs, but we are also trying to reach out to private businesses who may be interested in sponsoring a student from their community to attend. Upon their return, each student will be asked to present a report on their experience to their sponsor.

If you want to participate in this program, I encourage you to call Jamie Schmale in my office at 324-2400 or 866-688-9881 for more details.

Correction: Editorial referred to emergency training sessions

Last week's editorial mistakenly made reference to three municipalities in Haliburton County. The editorial meant to say emergency services has three more training exercises to do. There are four municipalities in Haliburton County, Highlands East, Algonquin Highlands, Minden Hills and Dysart et al. The Times apologizes for the confusion.

Ross Memorial Hospital Strategic Plan 2005-2010 Inviting Public Participation

The Ross Memorial Hospital Board of Governors recently launched the development of its next Strategic Plan. This Plan will cover a timeframe of the next 3 to 5 years and will be of much assistance to the Hospital in the development of its future role and function in order that it may best meet the priority program needs of our community. This project will commence immediately and should be completed by January 2005.

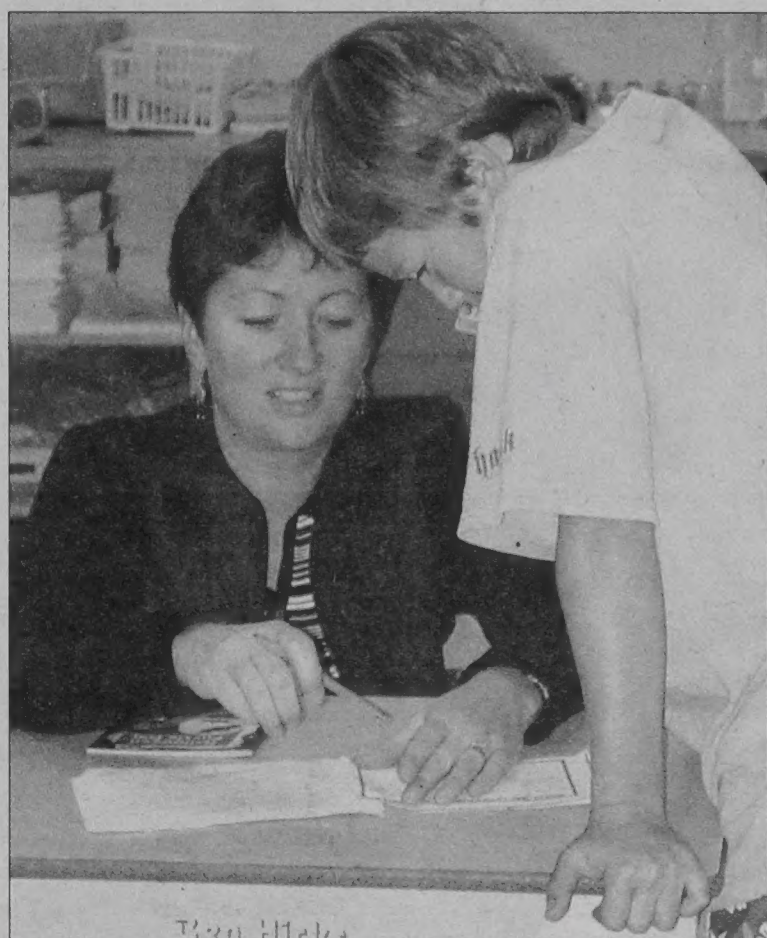

As this is an important project, which will help determine the future development of hospital programs and facilities, it is our intention to provide opportunities for input from our external stakeholders. Therefore, we are now seeking participation from the community we serve, and would like to develop a focus group to gather input for this important process.

We know you are busy, and for the best use of your time, members of the focus groups will meet once or twice and be provided with drafts of information in advance of the meeting. This will give you the opportunity to consider new ideas prior to the meeting.

If you are interested in assisting with providing input to our Strategic Planning process by serving on a focus group, please contact us by Friday October 15, 2004 through Julia Bryan, our Coordinator of Employee & Community Relations at (705) 328-6246 or by email to jbryan@rmh.org

Vera Smith and Joan Lockington play one of the songs from the new Sentimental journeys songbook when it was launched at Hyland Crest last week.

Seniors singing to a new tune

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times Staff

Gathered 'round a piano the participants in the Victorian Order of Nurses's day program at Hyland Crest hold six years of hard work in their hands. Marion Robson and Joan Lockington had brought several copies of a Sentimental Journey Down Memory Lane to the centre to launch this new songbook.

Robson said most programs for seniors, nursing homes, or long-term care facilities use the Sing Out songbooks published in 1973. She was asked six years ago by a group of seniors if they could sing some different songs. The simple question resulted in a quest for funding for a new songbook.

That quest resulted in several different road trips to Toronto offices, grant applications and multiple phone calls but at the end of the day a partnership was formed between the Ontario Society of Senior Citizens' Organizations, Mapleridge Seniors in Peterborough and the Ontario Trillium Foundation.

Robson says once funding was secured they did a survey to find out what songs seniors wanted to sing. A volunteer committee consisting of members from Haliburton, Kawartha, Durham Pine Ridge and Peterborough narrowed down 500 suggestions to 100 songs. However, the number still exceeded the funding the committee had secured so additional fundraising was done.

"Fax, e-mail, telephone, the wires were burning while asking for donation. ...Several other corporate and private individuals were very generous and we were 'on the road again.' We extend our sincere thanks to everyone who answered our call," says Robson.

She said the challenge in providing songs for seniors is that they often need to be transposed to a lower key. She says people's voices get lower as they age. She says the different key means that in order to provide music, you need to do more than just change the words into large print.

Robson says the interesting thing is that the music book version with the sheet music has been more in demand than the lyric books since the books came out this fall. They have already sold the first printing of 250 books.

The VON group was very interested in the books and enjoyed learning some of the new songs that they were not familiar with. Lockington says the music is still from the same era that would appeal to seniors. The exception is Take Me Out To The Ballgame and Happy Wanderer. Those two were included because the music was never available due to copyright but now the two songs are in the public domain.

Anyone interested in obtaining a copy of Sentimental Journey can e-mail Robson at marjac16@nexicom.net or call 705 743-6894.

The 17th annual Haliburton County Studio Tour is a showcase of local work by artisans living in the county. Hundreds attended each studio on the opening weekend despite the showers that fell on the first day. There are 20 studios in the Highlands participating in the tour that continues during the Thanksgiving weekend, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 9 and 10. Above, six-year-old Connor Brandon watches Grahame Wales throw clay, creating a honey jar. Brandon was touring the studios with his parents.

Better Health Care for Canadians: A 10-year plan

Working together, the Prime Minister, Premiers and Territorial leaders have signed a 10-year plan, supported by $41 billion in new federal funding, that will lead to better health care for Canadians.

Better Health Care

☑ Reduce waiting times

- Improve access so that Canadians don't wait as long for key tests, treatments and surgeries

☑ More Doctors, Nurses and other Health Professionals

- Plans to train and hire more health professionals while also developing faster accreditation for foreign-trained health professionals

☑ Expand home care

- Provide better support for people being cared for or recovering at home

☑ Improve access to family and community care

- Increase 24/7 access to doctors, nurses and other health professionals

☑ Better Access to Needed Medicines

- A commitment to manage drug costs and ensure that no family is forced to choose between needed medicines and financial ruin

☑ Improved Aboriginal Health

- New investments and better planning to close the gap between Aboriginals and other Canadians in terms of health

Shorter Waiting Times

The federal, provincial and territorial governments have committed to report clearly on the progress we are making in health care and, for the first time will report on progress in reducing waiting times.

☑ Comparable indicators ... so we can measure

- Federal, provincial and territorial governments will use comparable information to report their progress in improving access to doctors, and to diagnostic and treatment procedures

☑ Benchmarks ... so we know what we are striving for

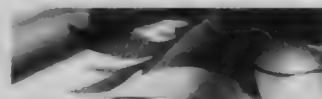

- Federal, provincial and territorial governments will set medically acceptable waiting times – based on advice from medical experts – starting with cancer, heart disease, diagnostic imaging, joint replacement, and sight restoration

☑ Targets ... to drive change

- Provincial and territorial governments will set their own targets and report annually to citizens on progress in reducing waiting times

Canadians will see for themselves where their health care money is going and how it is making a difference.

Minden gets its own physiotherapy department

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times Staff

There is a lot more stretching going on at the Minden Hospital.

Patients now have an opportunity to work their muscles as the hospital stretches its services to include physiotherapy.

Susan Reid, director of acute ambulatory care, says they are very excited about being able to offer this service in Minden. The space had always been available in the Community Health Centre wing but it was not equipped until recently.

The physiotherapy program is publicly funded and requires a physician's referral. Services are available Monday to Friday afternoons from 1:00 to 4:30 p.m. Appointments can be made by calling the Haliburton site at 457-1392 ext. 226 or by faxing a medical referral to 457-2398.

Sue Ripley, known as "Physio Sue" says the facilities are great. There is sufficient space and she is very happy to be offering a necessary service.

Her co-op student Erin Burtch has been busy putting up the proper signage for the new room and helping them to get organized as they set up the new office.

Ripley is assisted by fellow physiotherapists Amanda Morrison and Maureen Hunt.

Airports play important role in emergencies, conference told

by IZABELA JAROSZYNSKI
Times Staff

Community airports should be part of a municipality's emergency measures plan, a group of airport managers was told on Wednesday.

The group was gathered at the Wigamog Inn for the 2nd annual airport managers conference. This year's agenda included national security and emergency management.

JoAnn Kroph-Hedley, a community officer with the government agency Emergency Management Ontario (EMO), spoke to the group about the important role that airports play in emergency situations.

She said that the province began to reevaluate its emergency measures in the late 1990s, but legislation wasn't passed until after the September 11th attacks in the United States.

The legislation created the newly enhanced EMO, whose mandate is to "create safe, secure and disaster-resilient communities through comprehensive emergency management programs," Kroph-Hedley said.

In 2003, the program was put to the test when Ontario was struck with two big emergencies: SARS and the massive power outage. The recent Peterborough flood was another test for the system.

Kroph-Hedley said that in Ontario, an average of 20 tornadoes occur each year. Added to that are yearly floods, forest fires and earthquakes.

Although the provincial and federal governments are available to assist in emergencies, the ultimate responsibility lies in the hands of municipalities.

Across Ontario, municipalities are being asked implement their own plans and Kroph-Hedley hopes that airports will be incorporated in those plans.

In Algonquin Highlands, council has already done so, making John Packer, the airport manager, the alternate emergency coordinator.

The municipality also applied to the Joint Emergency Preparedness Program (JEPP) on behalf of the airport for a generator. The application was recently approved and will cover 45 per cent of the cost. The generator will be used by the municipality in emergency situations.

Kroph-Hedley pointed to Algonquin Highlands as an example of a municipality that understands the importance of the airport in emergency situations. She said she cannot believe that some municipalities don't consider airport funding as essential.

"It boggles my mind that your communities don't see you as vital," she said.

The group included airport managers from Chatham-Kent, Collingwood, Huronia, Kincardine, Owen Sound, Parry Sound, Saugeen, Stratford, St. Thomas, Tilsonburg, Tobermory, Wiarton/Keppel, and Wingham. It is the second time that Stanhope airport played host to the conference.

September had 23 sunny days

by PHIL GRAHAM
Times Staff

After a wet summer we finally got a break. September was a very pleasant month with many sunny days and not much rain. The average temperature was 15.8° C, 1.5 degrees warmer than last September, also much drier. There was less than two inches of rain compared to five inches of rain last September.

Luckily there was lots of sunshine, 23 days of sun and only three days with rain. There was only one morning with frost in town but several mornings near by. We were lucky because we didn't have many effects of hurricanes from the south. The show of colour this year seems to be later but should be good for Thanksgiving.

Average high: 23.5° C, 73.3° F

Average low: 8.2° C, 46.7° F

Average for month: 15.8° C, 60.4° F

Two organizations bid for county's marketing contract

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the September county council meeting.

Councillors will review the two bids it received to manage the county's marketing program at a special meeting on October 19.

The bidding process was the culmination of festering unhappiness among some county councillors about the work done by the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber receives from $135,000 to $150,000 a year from the county to market the Highlands.

To put the matter at rest, after the spring budget process county council decided to put the contract out for tender. Groups were asked to outline how they would spend a budget of between $135,000 and $200,000.

Council received two bids, one from David C. Page and a joint submission for the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with Haliburton Tourism.

Water Trails

Now that two years of funding will run dry next spring, the Haliburton Highlands Water Trails Committee has come up with a strategy to continue work on the management of canoe routes in and around the Frost Centre.

The committee has given the province three options for continued management of the water trails:

- continue with the status quo, with the Ministry of Natural Resources funding the project and Algonquin Highlands managing it;

- go to a user pay system; or
- do nothing and walk away when the funding runs out.

The committee's preference is the first option and county council endorsed the committee's brief to the government.

In case of emergency

What happens when everything that can go wrong does?

That's the question emergency services personnel wrestled with during a recent training exercise

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

Two major accidents, one involving a school bus filled with children, take place at the same time. Police, paramedics and firefighters scramble to figure out how best to employ the county's emergency resources to respond as the sirens start blaring.

Just as they seem to be getting these situations under control there's another accident, this time involving a van load of six people.

It makes for some tense times as the people at a central command office juggle the conflicting and pressing demands.

Thank goodness this never happened, in real life that is.

Representatives of numerous emergency and support services recently gathered at the Haliburton County council chambers to undergo an emergency management training exercise. Personnel from Emergency Medical Services, fire departments, the OPP, Family Services, the Health Unit, Haliburton County and others local services were involved.

The morning session was devoted to training and the information was used in the afternoon during the mock emergency.

Community Emergency Management Solutions (CEMS), a company founded by Rod Manley of Peterborough, conducted the session. The company was hired by Haliburton County to provide training as part of the provincial government-mandated emergency planning program.

The mock emergency scenario involved two accident sites. One was just north of Ox Narrows on Highway 35. It involved a collision between a tanker truck carrying propane and a bus loaded with children and some of their parents, which resulted in the closure of Highway 35 and Haliburton County Road 11.

The second scenario, which occurred at the same time, as the first, involved an overturned tanker truck loaded with chlorine at the corner of Highway 118 and Sunnyside Street in the village of Haliburton.

The council chamber was set up with a closed telephone system. The people providing information from the simulated accident scenes were stationed in another room.

During the course of the mock accidents, additional scenarios were added to the mix, with a van loaded with six people supposedly colliding with the overturned tanker in Haliburton and a vehicle going off the road and into the water at the Highway 35 and County Road 11 site.

Information was constantly fed to the various services for their input and suggestions about how to solve problems as they arose.

Maps were spread on a table in the middle of the room and the players in the exercise gathered for scrums around the map to decide the courses of action.

For example, since Highway 35 was closed because of the mock accident, ambulances from Bracebridge and Huntsville would have to be dispatched and patients taken to hospitals in those two centres.

At the Haliburton village scene, the threat of a chlorine leak required plans for the evacuation of everyone within a one kilometre radius.

The process evolved as new components were added to the two accident scenarios, as they would during a real emergency. Decisions were made based on the urgency of the situations and information was shared between the various services represented at the control centre.

Hazardous materials disposal experts would be called to deal with the threat of potential harm to people if the chlorine tank had leaked its cargo and plans for containment of hazardous materials were made. Co-ordination of busing for the evacuation and other services, such as the Salvation Army and Red Cross were contacted for support.

Each of the service representatives had specific jobs, as set out in the morning training session. Everything from traffic control and transportation of victims to evacuation of nearby residents (including Haliburton's Extencicare facility), preventing any hazardous materials from entering watercourses and providing blankets for victims was covered in the exercise. Arrangements were made to evacuate people from Extencicare to the Haliburton High School and later, when the perimeter was extended one kilometre for the evacuation, to the Minden Community Centre.

A log of the information provided by on-scene personnel was recorded at the command centre as it was provided, including time and details. Representatives from each service were encouraged to check the log periodically since conflicting reports from different sources were occasionally received. At one point, reports were received from two different sources. One reported that the driver the tanker was drunk and standing on top of it smoking a cigarette. Another report was that the driver was still trapped in the cab of the truck.

Because of the danger involved with the chlorine tanker crash, Dysart Township officials called a state of emergency. The County held off and it was decided that a larger scale declaration was not necessary.

When the mock emergency exercise was called to a halt, Manley asked each of the participants for a verbal report as well as a written evaluation.

County Warden Bill Davis said the exercise was "really well thought out and the scenarios strategically placed." He said he learned it was important not to jump the gun on declaring a state of emergency. "All things have to be weighed before the decision is made," he said.

Haliburton County CAO Jim Wilson termed the session "a good exercise." He suggested the Ministry of Natural Resources be included the next time. MNR Area Supervisor Bill Hutson attended as an observer but not a participant. Hutson was asked for comments and he noted that the MNR has the ability to mobilize a large force of personnel (fire crew) very quickly, which could be very valuable in some situations. He added that it was valuable experience for him to attend the exercise.

Tamara Williams of the county office noted that since there were two incidents occurring simultaneously, it may have been better to have separate logs for each incident. She was in charge of keeping the log up to date and she said it was confusing at times trying to distinguish which information was associated with which accident scene. She suggested one person be assigned to log information for each incident.

Expecting the unexpected is key

OPP Public Relations Officer Mark McMaster took the exercise in stride. He was assigned the task of relaying information to the media. "It was no different than any other incident," he noted. He said it was important to make sure the information given to the media was as accurate and up to date as possible.

Morris Honeyman, representing Social Services, said it was difficult to keep up with paperwork, participating in the scrums and co-ordinating resources and volunteers. He agreed the exercise was very worthwhile.

Tom Reddering of the Health Unit said the exercise was a great experience. He noted that everyone involved should "expect the unexpected" and try to prepare for unforeseen problems.

Manager of Emergency Medical Services Bob English said communication is the key. He said the use of cell and satellite telephones and two-way radios may need to be employed as well as normal telephone services. He suggested the use of ear phones to avoid the confusion of hearing several conversations at once because of the close proximity of several people.

County Roads Manager Doug Ray said he enjoyed the exercise. "It was very informative," he said. He noted that the co-ordination of personnel is important.

Dysart et al Fire Chief Miles Maughan thought that having everyone in one room was confusing. Using several rooms might eliminate some of the confusion. He said the use of a log system was very helpful to keep everyone up to date.

Acting OPP Staff Sergeant Tim Pierce said the exercise reinforced his confidence in the personnel from all of the agencies involved. He said he was impressed with the way everyone got along and the interaction between the participants.

Joanne Kropf-Hedley, a community officer with Emergency Management Ontario (EMO), is an adviser assigned to this project. She is assisting with the implementation of the plan. She noted that in a real emergency situation it is important to make sure personnel on the scene of an accident or other emergency situation are scheduled.

She said it is human nature to want to stay until the situation is resolved. "People don't want to leave a scene while it is still active." But that can lead to people becoming excessively fatigued, which can result in bad decisions.

EMS Manager Bob English explained that this exercise was the 10th of a 12-point plan mandated by the provincial government to make sure counties and municipalities are prepared in the event of an emergency.

OPP acting Staff Sergeant Tim Pierce, Dysart et al Fire Chief Miles Maughan, Haliburton County CAO Jim Wilson and Social Services Manager Morris Honeyman discuss strategy at the map table during the Emergency Management Training Exercise.

There's something good in every one of these cans.

Every aluminum and steel can that gets recycled is put to good use. Empty aluminum beverage cans are turned into brand new cans - often back on store shelves within 60 days. Steel cans are turned back into food containers, too, but they can also become parts of automobiles, bridges or even new houses.

Aluminum and steel cans can be recycled over and over, infinitely.

Making new products from recycled material uses much less energy than making them from raw materials. And the more cans you recycle, the more money your municipality raises to finance its recycling program.

We're half way there.

Right now, about 50% of all cans in Ontario get recycled. The ones that don't are wasted, ending in landfill sites rather than being put to valuable use. Let's all put more into our Blue Box, and get more out of it.

Can we put more aluminum and steel cans into the Blue Box? Can we divert needless waste from landfill sites? Can we save more energy? Can we put every empty can to good use?

The answer is simple. Yes, we can.

Makeshift bear bells alleviate mailbox fear

Another beautiful October afternoon and I know that the mail piling up in the box at the end of the long farm lane can no longer be ignored. Relatively fresh bear scat on the route is hardly an incentive, however. Item G414 in the new catalogue from Museums of Canada may offer a possible solution. For only $9.99

Bear Bells, which can be easily attached to backpack or wrist, will let bears who apparently dislike surprise know where you are. They are also suitable for your dog to wear.

Yellow lab King and I can delay no longer. Armed with three sleigh bells and one old rusty cow bell we strike out. Ponies follow along the pasture fence and a great blue heron feeding at the pond pauses. He didn't like surprises either and took early leave.

Kinmount United Church reminds that its Harvest Supper on Saturday, October 16 will be served at a new location – the Kinmount Community Centre – from 4 to 6:30 p.m. The Centre is located at Monck Road (C.R. 45 West) and Hwy. 121 and tickets are available at the door.

The Haliburton 50+ Club invites you to its first meeting of the new winter season on Thursday, October 21 at the Legion Hall. This month's event (non-smoking) will be a potluck supper with a social evening and guest speaker. Doors open at 4:30 p.m. with dinner at 5:30 p.m. New members are welcome. Please remember to bring your favourite dish for the potluck and, if planning to attend, confirm with Jim or Ruth by Tuesday, October 19 at (705) 457-2124.

Encouraging today's youth

Nominations are now being accepted for the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards

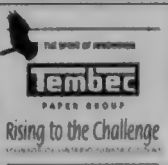

Let's recognize the best of our young people. If you know a young person, aged 6 to 17, who is involved in worthwhile community service; a special person who is contributing while living with a limitation; a youth who has performed an act of heroism; or a "good kid" who shows a commitment to making life better for others, doing more than is normally expected of someone their age – help us recognize their contribution – nominate them today!

Nominations will be accepted until November 30.

Contact this newspaper or the Ontario Community
Newspapers Association at www.ocna.org or 905-639-8720.

ACCEPT THE CHALLENGE - NOMINATE SOMEONE TODAY!

Nominate a Highlander of the Year

Once again it's time for everyone to consider whether there is a business, an individual or a group in our community worthy of recognition as Business of the Year or Highlander of the Year. Although nominees for Business of the Year are limited to Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce members in good standing, the Highlander of the Year can be awarded to any individual or group in our community.

Nominations will be open until October 8, at which time a Chamber committee will review all submitted nominations to ensure that all eligibility criteria have been met. The acceptable nomination forms will then be posted on the Chamber website for review by members and the voting will take place through the website. Voting will continue until October 20, at which time the winners will be determined.

The Business and Highlander of the Year will be announced and introduced at the Annual General Meeting pm Friday, October 22 at the Delta Pinestone.

Nomination forms are available at the Chamber office on Hwy. 35 in Minden. Call 286-1760 for details or e-mail charlene@hhchamber.on.ca.

Meanwhile, the Chamber announces that local resident Brigitte Gall, host of the popular television show Me, My House and I, as well as the past host to World's Greatest Spas, will be the agm's keynote speaker.

Get artsy and crafty

Annual show and sale opens in Dorset tomorrow

Don't miss the annual Dorset Thanksgiving Arts and Crafts Show to be held at the Dorset Recreation Centre on Saturday, October 9 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Artists will be showcasing all handmade goods such as paintings, pottery, jewellery, stained glass, wood-working, rag rugs, dolls, hand sewn fabric items and more. This is a great opportunity to start your Christmas shopping early, get out for a drive and enjoy the fall colours. A delicious lunch by the Dorset Heritage committee will be available.

A few tickets are still available for the Dorset Volunteer Fire Department Thanksgiving Dinner to be held on Sunday, October 10 with two sittings, one at 4:30 p.m. and one at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for seniors and $6 for children 12 and under. Call Donna at 705-766-9253.

There are lots of great and exciting events going on in conjunction with the Hike Haliburton Festival taking place Friday October 15 to 17 including a hike right in Dorset.

The Dorset hike takes place on Sunday, October 17. The "Sunrise Walk" is a great start to a day of hiking. As we move deeper into the fall season the sun rises a little later each morning and makes it a little easier for us to hike the trail to the top of the Dorset tower and appreciate the sunrise. Savour the beauty and quiet of the early morning; the cool autumn air and fog as you do some gentle stretching (qigong) for your bodies.

A light snack will be shared as well as some good organic coffee and tea. Lynda Shadbolt will be your guide.

Fusion and fireworks

Agnes Jamieson Gallery hosts a showing of contemporary clay and glass

by LAURIE CARMOUNT
Special to the Times

Trying to keep some community programming momentum during construction, the Agnes Jamieson Gallery will be showing the Fireworks Exhibition. This is a juried travelling exhibition of hand-crafted work in clay by members of FUSION: The Ontario Clay and Glass Association.

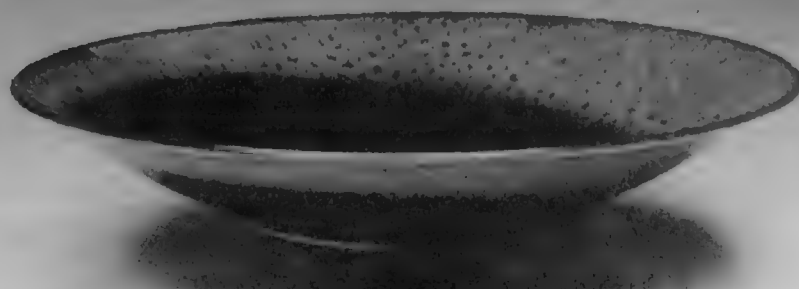

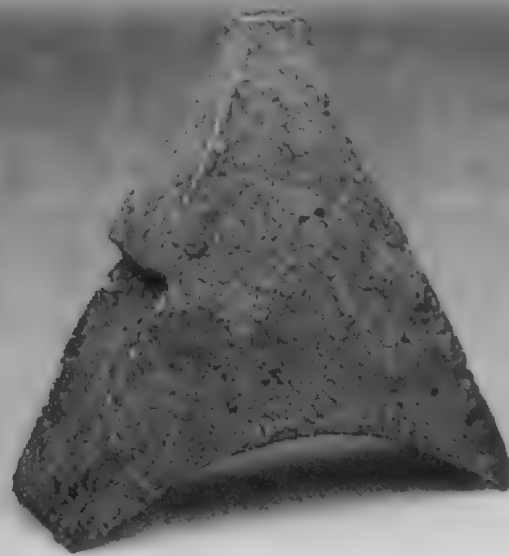

The Fireworks Exhibitions offer FUSION members the opportunity to exhibit their work throughout Ontario, and offer communities throughout Ontario an opportunity to see contemporary creative expression in clay and glass.

Over the years the Fireworks exhibitions have been mounted in galleries and art centres across Ontario.

Pieces selected for Fireworks were based on the combined experience and expertise of two internationally recognized jurors, Janet Mansfield from Australia and John Chalke from Canada, who chose 30 pieces for this exhibition out of 160 entries.

This exhibition will be held in the Common Room - space is limited. It will still be a wonderful opportunity to view such a diverse collection of clay and glass. Be sure to visit us from October 8th to November 20th for this exhibition.

Fall youth workshops are still being offered. Drawing classes with Charles O'Neil on October 16 and 23 at the gallery are running from 9 a.m. to 12 noon for ages 10-13 and 1 to 4 p.m. for ages 14-18. Fees are $20, not including supplies.

After-school art workshops are also being offered with a different art experience at each. Printmaking, Mask and Storytelling with Fay Wilkinson are just some of the fun workshops for November. Offered every Monday after school from 3:45 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. for $35 per workshop.

Kidswriters Club is also underway every other Tuesday after school. Here is an opportunity to have your child work with a professional writer to enrich their writing skills. The fee is only $5 per workshop.

Pre-registration for all workshops is required. Please call the gallery at 286-3763.

The gallery is also hosting a Pumpkin Carving Contest for the weekend of Halloween. Bring the scariest or funniest carved pumpkin to the gallery on Saturday October 30th from 1pm to 5pm.

Put a penny in the jar by the Jack O' Lantern you feel is the best. The jar with the most pennies wins a cool prize! Get creative and have fun! Come by Hallowe'en night for treats at the museum Bowron Log home and see all the pumpkins lit. Scary!

The Museum closes after October 9th. Agnes Jamieson Gallery hours are Wednesday to Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Thanksgiving Sunday and Monday.

Chickadees flocking back to Canada

Two winters ago, bird feeding enthusiasts were worried by the decline in Black-capped Chickadees coming to their feeders.

"The Black-capped Chickadee is the most common feeder bird in eastern Canada," says Becky Whittam, Canadian co-ordinator for Project FeederWatch. "It is therefore of concern to us when we see a dip in numbers of this species. Some people were blaming West Nile Virus."

The chickadee normally visits anywhere from 90 to 94% of feeders across Canada, in groups of about four individuals at a time, based on data from Project FeederWatch, a long-term study of winter birds. In 2002-2003, chickadees visited only 87.8% of Canadian feeders in groups averaging 3.5 individuals – the lowest (by 2%) since the continent-wide project began in 1987.

This "blip" in feeder visitation by chickadees in 2002-2003, observed continent-wide, was most apparent in Quebec and Ontario.

Data from the winter of 2003-2004 should quiet people's fears, however, as the Black-capped Chickadee once again visited 90.2% of feeders, based on a sample of 1,456 feeders across the country.

"My bird counts have rebounded to their old levels, after significantly lower levels last winter," wrote FeederWatch participant Gord Belyea of Lake of Bays.

"We can't really say why chickadees experienced such a low year in 2002-2003," says Whittam, "although it might be related to a poor breeding season the summer before, or perhaps simply to a large natural food crop or an overall mild winter, leading to less feeder visitation by this species. We're just glad they came back!"

The decline was likely unrelated to West Nile Virus, because it was seen in regions where the virus has not yet been found.

Project FeederWatch monitors common birds, such as the Black-capped Chickadee, that come to feeders in winter. Project FeederWatch has more than 16,000 participants across North America. The information collected by these "FeederWatchers" tells scientists how winter bird populations are growing or declining, and how their continent-wide distributions are changing – information that is crucial to effective bird conservation programs.

Project FeederWatch is always on the lookout for new participants. Participants watch birds at their backyard feeders once every two weeks from November through March. Participants in Project FeederWatch are asked to pay $35 to become members of Bird Studies Canada (BSC), a national, non-profit research institute studying birds and their habitats for conservation. To register, fill out the online form at www.bsc-eoc.org/national/pfwsign or call 1-888-448-2473.

Having chickadees at the feeder is a lot like having friends over. Tiny, adorable and fearless, they sing their own names in perky voices. The good news is, they are flocking back to Canada in high numbers.

Hey kids! Don't miss the Hallowe'en bash in Stanhope

Fall is officially here. The leaves are changing colour and making Stanhope burst with beauty. With the change in the leaves, comes a change in the air and at the moment it seems pretty darn cold! Despite the chilly weather, fall is personally my favorite season. It is the beginning of a season to give thanks and appreciate life in the Highlands. Thanksgiving is just around the corner, only a few days left to get the turkey and other yummy favorites your family loves for Thanksgiving.

It takes a little bit of time and a little community spirit to participate in the events offered in the community. A big thanks goes out to all who came out and stopped by the many events that were going on in Stanhope last weekend. From music concerts to craft sales and foggy memories, there was something going on in Stanhope. Support your local community service groups and businesses, we need them around!!

If you were a coach or a committee member for the 2004 Kids Stanhope Soccer League, listen up! There will be a wrap up meeting on Tuesday October 19th in the basement on the Stanhope Library at 7 p.m. All committee members and coaches should attend this wrap up meeting. We will be welcoming new committee members, giving results from the summer and sharing ideas for the 2005 season. If you can not make the meeting please call Julie at 489-2702.

STANHOPE LIFE

Alisha Lafleur
766-9968 or 489-2379

The Stanhope Recreation Committee will be hosting the Kids Hallowe'en Party on Sunday October 31st. The party is planned to start at 6:30 p.m. and is expected to have a great turn out from all of the little ghosts and goblins hunting for candy. Trick or Treaters will experience fun Hallowe'en games, scary stories and mounds of candy from candy island. There will be a pumpkin carving contest, judging and presentation of the prize will be at 8:00 p.m. Bring your carved pumpkin from home and win a great prize for the whole family. First Second and Third place prizes will be awarded to the best Halloween carving. Don't miss this grueling event. If you would like to make a donation of candy, decorations or prizes to the Stanhope recreation committee for the Hallowe'en Party please call 705-754-3131, any donation big or small would be greatly appreciated.

Tour Haliburton County and take a look at all of the talented people we have in our community. In Stanhope especially, there are many arts and crafters who make some of the most original pieces of work. Take advantage of these studio tour weekends and explore what these talented people have to offer.

Special happy Birthdays go out to my little sister Steffany who turned 1 year old and to my Uncle Steve who turned too old to mention yesterday, Thursday October 7th. Happy birthday wishes from the whole family.

Happy Thanksgiving to everyone, may you have lots of fun, lots of family time and lots of turkey and pumpkin pie this weekend! If you have anything you would like to say to Stanhope, e-mail me at alisha_stevens20@hotmail.com or call 705-754-3131

I would like to Thank Everyone who helped make the Summer of 2004 such a successful one and Wish all a Safe and Happy Thanksgiving.

"It was the attention to detail in putting up the signs and the care and detail of handling all aspects of the sale of my property. It was great to be able to leave to come home the day after putting up the signs and knowing that the selling of my property was in competent hands." - Ross R. Wilkinson

"I was most impressed with how fast you sold our home: one month, that's incredible! I also wanted to thank your assistant Marcia, who was always there to answer our questions when you were not available. I can assure you that I will highly recommend you to everyone we know. Again Thanks." - Glen McConnell

Loonies and ham dinner: The GCH recipe for giving

by BOB HUGHES
Times staff

There's nothing like a good, old-fashioned ham dinner to energize the "Giving Spirit," and that's just what happened when more than 100 Galway-Cavendish and Harvey people launched the township's 2004 United Way of Peterborough & District campaign by parting with over $1,600 at a September 29th dinner and auction evening.

Hosted in the Galway Community Hall by campaign cabinet leaders GCH CAO Pat Kemp and Smith-Ennismore-Lakefield Councillor Mary Smith, the all-inclusive dinner was prepared by resident Leon Brisson, deputy-reeve Madeline Pearson and councillor-at-large Don LaCombe and served by a phalanx of Kinmount-area young people.

Brothers Doug and Gerard Pearson – Gerard is the newly-appointed GCH public works director – then spent a good part of the evening coaxing lots of coins and cash from attendees' purses and pockets in the spirited Loonie Auction.

United Way Campaign chair Gary Rabjohn and Community Care – Harvey administrator Lynda McKerr added encouragement, with Rabjohn providing a campaign overview and McKerr speaking on the progress of her organization.

Donors to the auction were Patti Dudman, Ralph and Madeline Pearson, Don LaCombe, Patricia LaCombe, Sue Pearson, Edith and John Steiger, Kinmount Food Town, Austin Lumber, Nightingale Organic Farm and the executive committee on behalf of the Galway Community Hall.

A New Campus

A New Beginning

Sir Sandford Fleming College celebrates the opening of its new Haliburton campus

– Friday, October 1, 2004 –

A message from the principal

The opening of our incredible new campus is a very exciting time and we look forward to the future and what it will hold for new programs and a growing student population.

Students who come to the Haliburton Campus have always been welcomed by a caring and committed staff and community. They have also been taught by some of the best artists and faculty in Canada, and now they will enjoy this state-of-the-art facility in a magnificent setting.

This day has been made possible through the generosity of individuals and businesses who have invested in the college, its students and the future of their community – thank you.

It has taken many, many years of inspiration from advisors and volunteers, as well as political support, to bring us to this point and we want you to know how much we appreciate everyone who has pushed, pulled, guided and supported the college for the past 35 years.

Dreaming big; living large

How the community joined the bandwagon of a very big thinker to make an even bigger dream come true

Story, photos by Martha Perkins

Forty years ago, Ron McCaw sat in the living room of Jan and Dixie Augusteijn's home in Haliburton and shared his dream with the six people present. The United Church minister was as inspired as he was during a Sunday morning sermon as he talked about the village's potential to become the "Banff of the East."

On October 1, 2004, two of the people who were present that day sat in the lofty atrium of the new Sir Sandford Fleming College campus in Glebe Park and marvelled at what they beheld: three state-of-the-art studios lining one of the V-shaped wings of the 32,000 square foot campus with classrooms taking up formation in the other wing, a library, store, dinette and airy community hall, all with windows opening onto the surrounding forest.

"Have a dream and follow through," Dixie Augusteijn said after the official opening ceremonies. "The dream has to be something worthwhile and if you believe in it there's no reason why you can't do it."

She says Rev. McCaw would find it difficult to believe how far his dream has taken the community. His goal was to make Haliburton an arts mecca formidable enough to rival the arts school in Banff. "We went along because we thought it would be fun."

Another person present during those two important gatherings was Carole

Barbara Hodgson-Medd, whose late husband Doug was an ardent supporter of the School of the Arts in its infancy, shares memories with Dixie Augusteijn who hosted the first gathering of local residents who shared a vision to a "Banff of the East." school of fine arts in Haliburton County.

Finn, who bridged the art school's transition from a project of the newly-formed Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts to a year-round college campus.

"This has been a tremendously long and exciting trip," she told the people filling the atrium on the sunny October afternoon.

She told the story of Ron McCaw sitting in a quarry and having this "wonderful idea" about an arts campus in Haliburton. He shared his idea in 1966 with Jan Augusteijn, professional artist Karl Hanke, Danny O'Neil, owner of the local IGA and father of local artist Chuck O'Neil, and Liz Hobden, who had just married a local politician. (Rea Stinson was also involved in those early days.) The Haliburton School of Fine Arts was born.)

To publicize the initial courses and raise money for more, they organized a summer exhibition which highlighted the various villages in the county. "Thilde Nevitt took it on as a mission in life," Finn said.

The next big step was a meeting with David Sutherland, president of Sir Sandford Fleming College, and Premier Leslie Frost who promised to help the fledgling group as much as they could.

Co-operation was also forthcoming from Doug Hodgson, who would soon become the county's first director of education. "He had the foresight to see there was a possibility of having a campus here," Finn says. To this end, he convinced St. George's Anglican Church to include education as one of the permissible uses of the Glebe lands it was donating to the municipality. "It was our first toe in the hole."

In 1969, Don Popple, a teacher at the Peterborough Fleming campus, came up to Haliburton to be director of the School of Fine Arts, which had 455 students registered. He was married to Sheila Curry, whose father Ron was instrumental with the Guild, as well as reeve of Dysart et al and a Fleming board member. For the next six years Popple split his time between teaching in Peterborough and running the school in Haliburton, eventually hiring one of his students, Barb Bolin, to become the campus's first principal in 1975.

"A community our size couldn't have done it without Fleming college," Popple says. "It could never have happened."

As director of education, Hodgson did all he could to find a home for the classes, opening the doors of the high school to the school in the summer. Eventually there were so many students that classes were also put in the school that bears his name, as well as nearly every other spare building in the village.

The Haliburton campus eventually bought the old Haliburton high school and renamed it the Sisco Centre in honour of Norm Sisco, the former principal of the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School who was hired by the province to establish a new college system. Myriad programs were added over the years, some for just a year or two, some still in existence today. If there was an identified need for training, Fleming sought to fill it. The eco-tourism management course was the first of its kind in Ontario.

imagination at work

Many of the people in the audience were those who contributed to the successful $2.5 million capital campaign for the community's share of the $9-million project. Organizers were amazed by how willingly people donated to the project.

A few years ago, Chris Hodgson and Brian Desbiens met in Hodgson's Queen's Park office to come up with a strategy to make the Haliburton campus fit in with the province's criteria for funding. They relived the excitement of those years on October 1

At the beginning of the speeches on the Friday afternoon, the new college president, Dr. Tony Tilly, welcomed the 250 people, many of whom contributed to the community's $2.5-million share of the $9-million project. (Dysart et al contributed 10% of the total cost by providing the serviced land.)

"I've been deeply impressed by the generosity that you've shown in making this a reality," he said. The Friends of Fleming Foundation, as well as the local fundraising committee headed by Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey, took on an enormous challenge - and succeeded.

"The Haliburton campus has entered a new stage in its growth," Dr. Tilly said. "We can go from building a new campus to building new programs in the community. Our new campus has made the expansion possible."

Today there are up to 700 full- and part-time students and 3,500 School of the Arts students a year. The college contributes $1.5 million to the local economy annually, which is the equivalent of 100 full-time jobs.

Dysart et al Murray Fearrey started his speech by saying, "If it hadn't have been for Chris Hodgson, we wouldn't be here today."

Hodgson was the local MPP (and Doug's son). He was in Cabinet when the Tory government decided to undergo a new round of college expansion, the first since the 1970s. At first, Haliburton didn't suit any of the criteria for funding but that was before Hodgson and Fleming president Brian Desbiens got together in Hodgson's Queen's Park office and worked on developing a new criterion - community economic development. If a campus would add to a community's economic wellbeing it would be considered for funding. The idea was scratched on the back of an envelope and Hodgson took it across the hall to the pertinent ministry office.

Dysart council agreed to provide the serviced land to show its commitment to the province and the college. "It was a rough road," Fearrey says of the early debates about the campus's location in Glebe Park, which some people wanted to keep intact as parkland. "But any time," Fearrey added, "that I get to invest 10% to get $9 million and stable jobs, I'll do it."

He noted how quickly the community responded once the appeal was made for donations.

The fundraising committee consisted of Fearrey, Carole Finn, Gary Vasey, Derek Knowles, Brian Menton and Ted Brandon. Barb Bolin took a leave as campus principal to devote herself to the full-time job of raising $2.5 million.

"Every bold and daring project needs a bold and daring champion," Dr. Tilly said when he introduced Barb Bolin.

Bolin began by thanking Chris Hodgson for "his vision that Haliburton could be a college town and continually lobbying on our behalf." She also thanked the province for agreeing to fund the new campus (the only one in Ontario to fall under the new criterion.)

"I don't know what to say about the generosity of donors," she said. "It's been one of the most rewarding times of my career."

She thanked Fearrey for his leadership and friendship while sharing the dream of watching Haliburton grow.

And growing the campus is. In the past few years it has developed, with the help of Rachel Donovan, nine new programs when most campuses create only one every few years. Eleven people have already expressed interest in the sustainable building program, even though it has yet to be advertised. The new campus also allows for the addition of nine more weeks for the School of the Arts.

Four artists have added to the college's beautiful facade. Michael Fortune designed and built the magnificent front desk with its leaf marquetry by Haliburton's Kevin Dunlop. Gord Peteran crafted the massive front doors (which have yet to be painted red) as well as a welcoming chair and clock signifying Sir Sandford Fleming's gift to the world: standardized time. Artist-blacksmithing teacher René Petitjean designed and built the iron gates that will go at the end of each hallway for those times when the atrium is used by a community group. (Weddings are also being suggested!)

Bolin said that Brian Desbiens' "love of Haliburton and the arts has been so inspiring. She praised the college's Sandy Lawrence for overseeing the building of the campus, as well as the expansion projects in Peterborough and Lindsay. After months of working with Michael Monteith Construction, Bolin said she couldn't believe what she was about to say next: "I think I'll really miss you."

Bolin said that "the staff is what has made the campus what it is today." The Haliburton campus routinely gets a 95 per cent satisfaction response in surveys of students and she praised their hard work and devotion to the college.

Many artists have visited the new campus, she says, and they are all in awe of its design and magnitude. "I often hear people say, 'I can't believe this is in Haliburton.'"

Long-time Highlands cottager Marilyn Beamish represented the donors at the podium. Her family, through the Woodbridge Family Foundation, contributed the largest amount to the campaign.

Beamish first saw the location of the new campus on a cold winter's day. Months later, her only reaction was "Wow!"

"So much hard work and dedication goes into a project like this," she said. It was the donors' turn to say thank you. "Ours is the easy part. It's like being the grandparent - you don't have to do the work but you can be proud of the result."

"There are probably many reasons why donors contribute," she added. "It's a question of giving back to the community, Haliburton, that's so special to us."

The Beamishes have been cottaging here since the 1940s, when her father bought a lot of land for $900. "It's a place where we can all get together," she said, thanking her parents for their foresight.

Sandy Lawrence thanked all the companies and contractors who worked on the project, starting with the architects from A.J. Diamond Schmitt. "These guys were amazing," Lawrence said. "Barb and I kept coming at them from all directions."

She also thanked Pat Martin and Dan Sayers at the municipal office for their help and consideration, as well as local architect Hugh Taylor who volunteered for the project. "It was a team effort."

"This facility is a true wonder," said Lorna Plunkett, chairperson of the board for the Friends of Fleming Foundation. She has taken many summer courses at the School of the Arts and greatly admires the campus's natural setting. It will nurture the creativity of generations to come.

Plunkett thanked the volunteers on the campaign team. "They took the spirit of the campus and made it live in the hearts of the donors."

A donor wall is in the planning stages.

When it was Hodgson's turn to speak, he extended greetings on behalf of his wife Marie, who once served on the college's board of governors. She, like his brother Andrew, who was present (and who is now Tory leader John Tory's principal secretary), are graduates of Fleming College. Noting that Marie was unable to attend because she was helping with a hockey dinner for one of her four children's teams, he said "Marie has graduated to being a full-time hockey mom."

It was Murray Fearrey who encouraged Hodgson to seek a life in politics. "This town has been good to you," Fearrey said, "and now you should put something back."

Hodgson had three goals in municipal politics, and one was to see a new campus built. (He achieved his other two goals of better hospitals and a new sewer line, too.)

"It is a vision that many shared," he said, adding that Dysart council has been a "tremendous supporter" of the campus.

If you drive through the United States you'll come across many small towns which are built around a college or university. In Ontario, colleges are the denizens of cities. "We look at education in silos," he said, not realizing that it would take 12 years for Haliburton to find its niche.

The new campus was built on the foundation of the School of the Arts. He thought everyone else would quickly share his idea of using the campus as an economic development tool and was surprised when others took some persuading.

"Brian Desbiens bought into our vision, along with the board of governors," Hodgson said as he recounted the story of the meeting with Dr. Desbiens in his office to hatch the community development component of the funding criterion.

As well, "I'm forever grateful for the support of donors and friends and the community. It's never easy to do things."

Fleming College is known for the quality of its staff and instructors. "Barb Bolin shows that an individual can make a difference. She's kept it alive, growing and expanding, in good times and bad. She's made the campus what it is today."

On behalf of himself and Marie and their extended family, Hodgson extended thanks to everyone who's been involved with the project. "This is a day we should be proud of. A first day, because it's not just a day, it's a process."

MPP Laurie Scott, a graduate of Fleming's nursing program, brought greetings and a flag from the province as she wished the campus future success.

"We can all see how the programs are a natural fit with the environment," she said. "I'm confident many graduates will make this their home."

In introducing Dr. Desbiens, Dr. Tilly said his predecessor has shown "outstanding leadership" throughout his career, and the college's $27.4 million capital expansion projects are a shining example of what he has achieved.

"We're flying high," Dr. Desbiens said with his customary enthusiasm and boyish grin. "So many dreamers have come together to accomplish something extraordinary."

Thinking of Rev. McCaw and those early dreamers - "people who believe art could be attractive, not only to people here but that it could bring others to us" - Dr. Desbiens said that today would make them very proud.

But Haliburton is more than McCaw's vision of a Banff of the East. "Banff is an elite school. This campus is of the people. It started with the crafts and then provided access to post secondary education, made possible by people who believed in October 1 was an especially happy day for the staff of the Haliburton campus. They could finally enjoy the official opening ceremony for the new campus building. It took years of planning and hard work, to bring the dream to reality. The future looks bright for the local campus as it continues to create new programs with an emphasis on arts education.

its strengths.

It's been staffed by "educators who believe that by providing outstanding education we could make a difference in people's lives."

One summer, when he was visiting his Kennisis Lake cottage and taking a course at the School of the Arts, Bolin gave him the first Harry Potter book.

"I want to tell you, 'Welcome to Hogwarts,'" he smiled.

Think of the similarities. People have to journey here, crossing the water and going through "that invisible wall to this magical place. There are creatures in the woods and people coming out of rocks. And the faculty. Are they not unique characters? They're absolutely marvellous people to create magic."

On the way in that day, Dr. Desbiens said he stopped along the road and made an inukshuk. These stone markers became a symbol of the campus when John Leonard, one of the longest-serving arts teachers, created "Flint Eastwood" for the college's 25th anniversary. His creation now greets people to the new campus. Dr. Desbiens encouraged people to create their own welcome markers.

"There is magic here," he said. "Magic created this campus and sustained it."

"The headmistress is a wizard. She put a spell over all of us to make us believe this is possible."

"The campus is art. It's not just a building. Art comes from the heart and mind and passion. The people here truly care for students and one another. Great art also is inspiring. I'm inspired by Barb, the staff, the faculty, the community. Good art also challenges us. Art is universal, as education is. It's also transformational."

"But dreams aren't enough. You need commitment. Barb's not just a dreamer, she's a doer. And Murray said, 'We will provide you with the land and services.' We are thankful for his outstanding leadership. Chris followed through on everything you asked him to do. Chris, thank you for an outstanding job."

Small campuses are always threatened but the board of governors always stood by Haliburton, for which Dr. Desbiens is grateful. "I really believe we have a courageous board and a board with great vision."

The college's Barb Cameron was a "financial wizard. Chris could help us inside [Queen's Park] but he needed quality submissions" and that's where Cameron excelled. Of Sandy Lawrence he said, "This little lady is one dynamo."

He thanked the Beamish family for "the greatest Christmas present." The atrium is being called Beamish Hall in their honour. "You gave us hope and you helped us believe in ourselves. Mary, yes you can make a difference."

It all wouldn't have happened if "the staff of the Haliburton campus weren't so special. They make it an extraordinary experience for every student. They also lived in very difficult circumstances for so long. Thank you for what you've done for students."

"And every staff needs a leader. Barb Bolin is a graduate of Sir Sandford Fleming College. This is what a college graduate can do. She believed a Haliburton campus was possible. She believed we should build into this beautiful setting - the mystique and friendliness of this community. Barb, you've slain many dragons and challenged us to do the right thing."

"Now we can shape and form the dream. The arts are what will drive this campus but we're not done. Frank Lloyd Wright said architecture is poetry in space and light. This poem is being written by all of you and continues to be written."

"Now we can shape and form the dream. The arts are what will drive this campus but we're not done. Frank Lloyd Wright said architecture is poetry in space and light. This poem is being written by all of you and continues to be written."

440 THANK YOU

In Appreciation

To our many Friends who joined our family for the Celebration of the Life of Lloyd Coleman, our sincerest Thank You. Your kind words, your visits to the Monk Funeral Home & Zion United Church and your Remembrance Gifts, were all Gifts of Love. Your cards, letters & phone calls kept our Spirits up and the goodies which arrived at our home kept us well fed. To Dr. Stephen Ferracuti, for the years of keeping us on the go & Dr. Kirsty Gammon for being there just when we needed you, we are indebted. To the Staff at the Haliburton Hospital Acute Care & Extensive Care, thank you for the care you gave to Lloyd. To Rev. Meg Grieves, Melissa Stephens, Zion Choir, Joan Chapple & Jack Glenn for sharing in a Celebration that touched our very "Beings". To Jessie & Don Pflug for being there for us. To Zion United Church Women for the lunch you provided. It was a treat. Our thanks to Rev. Max Ward for his phone call from the West & Rev. Peter Walford-Davis for visiting us. To Kirsten Monk & Staff, thanks for your sharing of your knowledge & caring which got us through the days. To all who made this Day of Celebration, our heartfelt thanks to each of you.

450 IN MEMORIAM

HEWITT, SHIRLEY - In loving memory of Shirley Hewitt who passed away on October 7, 2003.

What would we give her hand to clasp,

Her patient face to see;

To hear her voice, to see her smile,

As in the days that used to be.

But some sweet day we'll meet again

Beyond the toil and strife,

And clasp each other's hand one more

In Heaven, that happy life.

You will always be loved, always remembered, and you will remain in our hearts forever.

Gail and Bob, Dean and Christine, Pamela and Brittany.

JOHNSTON, MYLES - In loving memory of a dear son and brother who was taken from us suddenly Oct. 11, 1968.

The things we feel most deeply are the hardest things to say
Our dear Myles we loved you in such a special way.

Remembering you son is easy, we do it everyday

Missing you is a heartache, that will never go away.

Forever remembered and sadly missed, Mom, brother and sisters.

MARILYN - In memory of my dear sister

Just when your life was brightest,

Just when your years were best,

You were called from this world of sorrow

To a home of eternal rest.

Love Nancy.
